Dear Romana

Research Visit to University of Stirling

Based on our previous correspondence and our mutual research interests, I would like to formally invite you to visit my laboratory and research group here in the Division of Psychology at the University of Stirling, in Scotland. I understand you are intending to come with support from your University for this visit. I am very much in favour of this. We have discussed a visit during November 2019.

I understand that the visit is intended to provide an opportunity to collaborate with your research in the area of social psychology of implicit relationship cues and waste sorting. Your preliminary results show that implicit reputation cues are a viable option for enhancing waste sorting behaviour. In the future, we might aim to find out which visual stimulus is the most effective and therefore propose how the environment of the waste sorting bin should look.

While you are here, I will also arrange opportunity for: discussion of our respective research and opportunities for further collaborative work; showing you our laboratory, our procedures, and general techniques, including facilities for odour assessment, eye-tracking, 3-D image capture, facial image manipulation, etc.; meetings with PhD students and MSc students working in mutually interesting areas. We also have at least one research seminar each week from an external invited speaker, and another series of internal seminars run by our Behaviour and Evolution Research Group, that you may wish to attend. Finally, of course we will offer you all the necessary facilities in order to perform these tasks, including workspace and access to the university intranet and library facilities.

I do hope you will be able to come, and I look forward to hearing from you

Yours sincerely

Professor S Craig Roberts
